High Scores Prevail In Qualifying Round of Ardsley Golf Tournament

Par for the Course Is 72, Yet in Field of 123 Johnny Anderson's 77 Score Wins Medal.

LL the strenuous club swinging and indoor teaching that's been going on the last winter falled to improve the playing of 123 goifers who competed in the opening tournament for the metropolitan district yesterday on the Ardsley links. Of course the players had their alibi, that the greens were heavy and a high wind from the river played pranks with high shots, but the scoreboard showed that but few golfers got below eighty. Par for the Ardsley course is 72, yet Johnny Anderson, national runner-up to Bob. Gardner last year, won the qualifying medal with a 77 score. The winner's score indicates how much the remainder of the starting field was off form.

Anderson never could get going on the outward trip. Poor putting gave him sixes at both the fourth and fainth holes. Coming in, he improved impressly, At the 150-yard thirteeath Anderson laid a midiron shot dead to the hole and ran down for a fine two.

The distribution of prizes will take place at the Thum Academy on Friday was take. Then he went to Ardsley and couldn't break in the first half dozen scores. Chishelm Beach of Fox Hills, a player who can generally be depended upon to march in with the leaders, slumped so badly that he quit and wouldn't turn in a card. Many novices competing in their first tournament also encounter that feeling of shame over their scores.
